Some tried to get away with double registrations

By Yvette D'Unienville

DESPITE awareness programs on radio Tuvalu about election procedures and law, some people still registered for two different electoral districts.

The screening for double registrations had been one of the complex duties carried out by registrations officers of each electoral district.

Registration officer for the Funafuti Kaupule Uluao Lauti confirmed that less than a hundred duplicated registrations have been found during the screening which contradicts with election laws.

Section 91 of Tuvalu's Constitution only allows an elector to vote in one electoral district, says the crown counsel Nele Semu Tusipepe.

Mr Lauti explains that in the cases of duplicated registrations, they found that a voter registered under two different surnames - the father's in one registration form but the husband's name in another registration form for a different electoral district.

In some cases, the voter used her or his Tuvaluan name on one registration form, but then used the English version of her or his name in a registration form for a different electoral district.

Senior Elections officer Tepaukie Sotaga said, the Elections Office under the Commissioner of Elections plays a very important role in seeing that election procedures are in accordance with elections laws.

Mr Lauti explained that in case a double registration happens to be identified on polling day, the police at the polling stations in each of the two electoral districts will be informed immediately to stop that particular voter from casting a vote in a second electoral district and that person will be dealt with according to the law

Taiwan's President Ma expresses gratitude for Tuvalu's message of condolence

By Yvette D'Unienville

THE government of Tuvalu has conveyed a message of condolences through Taiwan's government to families of those affected by the recent TransAsia Airways Plane crash in Taipei.

The press release states that on behalf of the Government and the people of the republic of China, His Excellency President Ma Ying—Jeou has expressed his most heartfelt gratitude to Tuvalu Prime Minister Hon Enelee Sosene Sopoaga for the gracious letter offering condolences to those affected by the plane crash.

His Excellency Ma further expressed that the kind words of sympathy from Hon Sopoaga are greatly appreciated by families who have lost their loved ones, as well as those injured in the accident, adding that the letter enforces their resolve to overcome this tragedy.

The message of condolence was relayed through the embassy of the Republic of China in Tuvalu to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the government of Tuvalu

A PURSE seine training course for local seafarers at the Tuvalu Maritime Training Institute on Amatuku will commence soon.

The training will enable local seafarers to gain the knowledge and skills on operational work on purse seine fishing vessels.

Director of Fisheries Samasoni Finikaso said most of the preparations for the implementation of the course are about to complete.

"A purse seine power bloc and a net need to be installed at Amatuku before the course took place. These new equipments will use for training of seafarers by getting them familiarize with the kind of work on purse seine fishing vessels," Finikaso said.

Once it is installed trainees will learn how to release the net and pulling out of the sea and also learn how to mend the net.

Local trainers at the institute have to attend a two-week training course in the Solomon Islands in order for them to be qualified to teach and train seafarers on the kind of work on purse seine vessels.

"The qualified trainers will work together with an expert from New Zealand on the power bloc and net training in the course," added Finikaso.

"The Korean Fishing Association KOFA had also confirmed it support to the training program and it will also send an expert from Korea to assist with the training at Amatuku."

The training program is expected to start in May targeting trainees at the institute with few seafarers who have completed maritime training at the school.

The training program is fully funded by the New Zealand government under its fisheries program with Tuvalu

New allowances for Government Pre-Service scholarship students

By Pua Pedro

PRE-SERVICE students studying in Fiji under Tuvalu Government scholarships are thrilled with the increase to their allowance after Government approved a new rate.

Nemaia Paulo Assistant Pre-Service Training officer said that the new rate is $43 FJD a day for single students including married students un- accompanied by their families.

"The former rate was $27 FJD a day and the change was made following a request put forward by former students who were able to justify to Government the need for an increase considering the expensive life in Fiji," said Paulo.

The new rate was endorsed by Cabinet and became effective this year.

Paulo said the Department is still working on the new rate for the accompany allowance for Tuvalu sponsored students.

One of the parents who was present at the Orientation of Government sponsored students beginning of this month thanked the Government for seeing that need, adding that she no longer worries about the high cost of living for her child in Fiji.

The allowance covers rent, food, electricity and water.

The In-Service Training Officer declined to comment as government is still in the process of working out a new rate for inservice students.

Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women reviewed the report on women's right in Tuvalu

THE Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women today considered the combined third and fourth periodic report of Tuvalu on its implementation of the provisions of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women.

When introducing the report, Puaita Etuati, Senior Assistant Secretary, Office of the Prime Minister of Tuvalu, said that significant developments in 2014 included the enactment of the new Family Protection and Domestic Violence Act and the adoption of the National Gender Policy of 2014.

In the area of education, measures were in place to closely monitor primary school attendance throughout the country and to provide more opportunities for students to pursue vocational and skills development courses.

As a small developing island State with limited resources, Tuvalu faced many challenges in the full implementation of the Convention, but the major obstacle was the devastating impact of climate change that the people continued to experience in their everyday lives which affected their livelihoods and caused fear and frustration.

Committee Experts recognized the challenges Tuvalu faced in the implementation of the Convention, particularly climate change, and welcomed the enactment of the law on family protection and domestic violence and the promulgation of the National Gender Policy.

They stressed the importance of an effective gender legal framework and the crucial role of national machinery in achieving gender equality, and expressed concern about a large number of discriminatory provisions in laws, including in the Constitution, and the long delay in the revision of the national legislation.

Experts recognized that climate change was of critical importance for Tuvalu and that it had already triggered migration of the population; they inquired about the impact of climate change and how it affected women, and how a gender perspective was integrated in the National Climate Change Policy and the Strategic Action Plan for climate change and disaster risk management.

In concluding remarks, Yoko Hayashi, Committee Chairperson, thanked the delegation for the constructive dialogue which had provided insight into the situation of women and encouraged Tuvalu to take all necessary measures to address the Committee's various recommendations for the benefit of women and girls in the country.

Ms. Etuati thanked the Committee Experts for their questions and hoped that the delegation had answered most of them; outstanding responses could be provided at a later stage.

The delegation of Tuvalu included representatives of the Office of the Prime Minister, Attorney General's Office, Gender Affairs Department, Ministry of Health, and Ministry of Education

PEOPLE on Niutao Island are experiencing an outbreak of diarrhea and flu like symptoms of body ache and coughing but the island's clinic has very limited medications for treatment. Staff Nurse at Niutao Clinic Ms Faailo Teo reported the clinic is now monitoring the dispensing of its medications because the boat is still yet to call at the island. According to Ms Teo the clinic has ran out of pain killers except a reserve limited supply of paracetamol tablets for children with serious illness

THE Department of Fisheries is looking at increasing the number of local observers as there is a need. Director of Fisheries Samasoni Finikaso said the department is trying to boost the number up to fifty as we have only 39 local observers employed under the program. He said there has been a great need of fisheries observers to work on purse seine fishing vessels however Tuvalu cannot cater because of the limited number of observers. Finikaso said the department is working on recruiting 15 new observers. The department is also looking at finding an insurance company to insure local observers.

MEMBERS of each island Lands Court had received the rest of their allowances from 2014. Peleata Poumaga from the Lands Department said the salaries had been paid out to all members. Director of Lands and Survey Fatasi Malologa said the issue was raised by the department and endorsed by cabinet. He said the cabinet agreed to pay out the allowances of members of the islands court on each island starting from January to December 2014

TUVALUANS have to be cautious when dealing with foreigners as they could leave without respecting their part of the arrangement. A local on the capital is furious with a Sri Lankan guy who was alleged to have sold the local's boat and outboard motor that were temporary lent to him out of the good heart of the local. It was alleged that the guy sold the boat and motor to another local before he departed the country for NZ with his family. However Police says the incident has not been reported.

HUMAN activities highly affects the formation of Tuvalu marine biology which creates Tuvalu islands. Matsudate Fumiko former JICA Foram Project coordinator said, the construction of more buildings and other developments such as sea wall, roads and wharfs affects Tuvalu marine biology. According to Fumiko, more construction leads to more destruction of foram sand and other living organisms in the sea. The decline in foram sand reproduction also shows a decline in lands structure and sea shore erosion by the sea current which more acute in Fongafale areas. Monden urges locals to protect the foram sand together with other living organisms in Tuvalu seas because they are very important to our marine biology

Peak tide of the year affected communities living in low lying areas By Kuata

Area near the Ulupuka Lukiluki multi-purpose court flooded during king tides of this month Photo: Mati Afelee

COMMUNITIES living near the coastal areas and lowlying areas were affected by king tides of this year over the weekend.

The king tide peak of the year was observed on Thursday 19th this week at 3.4 meters high.

Over the weekend, coastal areas of Fongafale were flooded by storm surges from the lagoon side.

The king tide brought debris into the main roads making access to the northern and southern ends of the island difficult.

Senior Met Observer Elifaleti Ene said the king tide of the month subsided on Sunday February 22.

He said this is a normal king tide of the year where low lying areas are the most affected during these months of the year.

Fenui witnessed that low lying areas, coastal areas and areas near burrow pits were flooded including the front side of Mac Kenzie Trading store.

Residents whose pig pens are situated to the eastern side of the island had to leave their vehicles on the opposite side of the airfield and crossed on foot with their loads to feed their pigs on the other side.

Areas near the burrow pits were also swamped with water from overflowed burrow pits.

Fenui learns that the highest peak tide recorded by the MET office was 3.4mtrs on the 24th February in 2006■

The women contributed in providing mini baskets of local food or loulou for their fund raise card game. Apart from Funafuti women, Vaitupu women on the capital have also been involved in raising funds to assist their island in its preparations for the 2016 EKT General Assembly.

♦ Local seasonal workers sacrifice a lot in order to send more of their weekly pay to meet the daily needs of their families in Tuvalu. They live on cheap food bought from the shops in NZ, but that didn't deter them from working hard to earn the next weeks pay, eventhough they are not required to work during rainy days. This was revealed by a reliable source who wishes anonymity but who used to assist Tuvalu seasonal workers in NZ in sending money home to their families. In a verbal conversation with this reliable source from New Zealand who is here in the country, she says she admires these locals for putting their families first. She said each worker normally sent around $500 to $800 a week to Tuvalu. Our local workers only withhold a lump sum of money to cover travelling expenses when they complete their working contracts, said the source

Challenge - OPM verses PUI By Yvette D'Unienville

TRUE to words, the Ministry of the Office of the Prime Minister (PUI) took its challenge with the Ministry of Public works and Infrastructure (PUI) seriously last Friday.

Spectators said it was a game worth watching last Friday at the airfield.

In the first round, the OPM team that consisted mostly of women, gave their all and might to defeat PUI and staffs danced with joy when OPM with five 'ulu' thrashed PUI and left it with two 'ulu'.

Swap over time – and OPM struggled against PUI. It was obvious that PUI had the leading hand in the second round with its strongest members at the 'alovaka' and the best at the 'kaulama.'

Both Ministries pulled out of ties several times and the umpire of the game – Feli Lameko from PUI couldn't keep still as his team lost several points to OPM.

But finally – PUI got the five 'ulu' and OPM had 4. Mr Lameko told Fenui that as of the recent game OPM and PUI each now has 1 win, so he left it to each Ministry to come up with something for next Friday

Tuvaluans residing in Fiji need to get their visa permits done

By Semi Malaki

TUVALUANS working or studying in Fiji need to be responsible in lodging their visas with Fiji Immigration.

Fenui received reports from a Tuvalu diplomat in Fiji stating that lots of Tuvaluans are failing to lodge their visa applications with Fiji Immigration and thus overstayed their visas granted by Fiji immigration upon arrival.

Fakavae Taomia took it to social media and said, this is an ongoing issue and Tuvaluans are reminded to take full responsibility and extend their permit if they need to stay in Fiji.

He said that the last trip of MV Manufolau from Fiji was delayed as Fiji Immigration Officials were sorting out locals who overstayed their visa permits.

"More than thirty Tuvaluan overstayers in Fiji returned on that trip," said Taomia

Director of Immigration Leilani Saitala told Fenui that people overstayed their visas because they failed to lodge their applications with Fiji Immigration to extend their period of stay in Fiji.

"Normally we are not informed by Fiji Immigration about these overstayers, until the overstayers show up at their office in Tuvalu with their letters showing their Fiji overstayed status and need assistance," Saitala added.

Other locals also raise their concerns with the issue and encourage Tuvaluans staying or studying in Fiji to be responsible and make use of this golden opportunity provided by the Government of Fiji

Pacific youth advocates against corruption By Semi Malaki

OVER 40 youth representatives from 15 Pacific Islands countries including Tuvalu gathered in Nadi, Fiji, this week to discuss ways to address corruption in the region.

The Pacific Youth Forum Against Corruption which opens on Sunday, brings together young Pacific leaders between the ages of 18 to 25 and aims to provide an opportunity to raise awareness on corruption and its negative impacts in their respective countries.

Tuvalu is represented at the forum by Bensitai Houati from the Tuvalu Red Cross Volunteer association and Faitofi Pusineli from the Tuvalu National Youth Council.

The youths were supported by the United Nations Development Programme, and the UN Office of Drugs and Crime in partnership with the Pacific Youth Council with funding from the Australian government.

UNODC Specialist Annika Wythes said that the forum expect young people to start to become more engaged in the fight against corruption in their community or nation.

Forum organizers say its aim is to give a voice to the young and marginalized people around the region who are speaking out against corruption and its corrosive effects on society.

The forum, which closes on Tuesday February 24th, is part of the UNDP's Youth strategy 2014 -2017 which aims to support capacity development of young people and youth organizations, by equipping them to engage in local and national development processes

THE deteriorating condition of the Nanumea Kaupule office has been a big worry to staffs of the Kaupule considering that a good number of staffs in different departments are housed under the building.

Fenui was told that the building is in a very bad condition and the roof and windows leaked badly during the recent strong wind that affected the country.

Sipele Tekava Kaupule Secretary said the oldest building on the island needs to be renewed to improve working conditions for the safety of office equipments and staffs working within the office

"During the recent strong wind, staffs had to fix the roof and windows to prevent rain from dripping into the office."

"The Kaupule has long proposed the need for a new office building to the ministry of home affairs," said Tekava

Temetiu Maliga Director of Rural Development said the ministry is working with donor partners to fund the upgrading of Kaupule Office on the outer islands

He said Turkey Government granted AUD$200,000 to fund the construction of the new Kaupule office for Nukufetau and Nanumaga■

Tuvalu Table Tennis Federation donated table tennis tables for Schools*By*

Pua Pedro

THE Tuvalu Tennis Federation has donated table tennis tables for Schools around the nation according to President of the Federation.

Allan Resture says, the Federation purchased 12 tables to be distributed among the Schools for children's practise.

He said, children are targeted because they are more easy to be trained than adults.

Resture said that tables have been sent on the latest voyage of the vessel to the central Islands where one is for Vaipuna Primary at Nui Island, Tutasi in Nukufetau, and two at Vaitupu, one for Tolise and the other for Motufoua Secondary School.

The tennis tables for the Northern Schools will be transported on the vessel next week.

The Federation will also donate a table to the Fusi Aofa Schoo for trainings of Fusialofa students because Para-Table tennis is among the international sports.

Last week the Ministry of Sports donated sports equipment to Sports Federations and during the function Resture told the gathering that sports equipment for the Tabletennis federation to be in the keep of the Ministry for distribution to Schools.

Including in the donation for the Federation are 12 pieces of nets and posts and 60 table tennis bats which cost one thousand three hundred and eighty dollars.

A teacher in one of the schools on the capital said the donation will boost skills and talents of
